Pipe bomb found in car at Sask. border crossing

Accused. A 21-year-old has been charged after explosive discovered by inspectors in car at North Portal

A Toronto man is charged after a pipe bomb was found in his car by border staff and detonated by police on Sunday as he tried to enter Saskatchewan at the North Portal crossing from the U.S.

Staff with the Canada Border Services Agency (CBSA) at the port of entry contacted RCMP about 3:30 p.m. after allegedly discovering the explosive device while examining some of the 21-year-old's possessions during a routine inspection.

"Our officers found a pipe bomb concealed in a bag in the trunk of his vehicle. From there, our CBSA officers secured a perimeter around the examination bay," Lisa White, Prairie region spokeswoman for the agency, told Metro from Calgary.

"That's where the device was controlled until the RCMP arrived," she added. "They controlled the pipe bomb and detonated it."

Border staff evacuated the inspection building where the suspect's 1999 Toyota was held, before an RCMP explosives unit arrived from Regina and removed the bomb and detonated it elsewhere shortly after 8:30 p.m.

"Nobody's life or safety was put in harm," said RCMP Sgt. Darryl Milo of a detachment in nearby Estevan.

Mounties said CBSA staff had continued moving holiday-weekend traffic through the crossing before the detonation, using a lane farthest from where the car and explosive were held. The detonation disrupted traffic coming in from North Dakota for about 15 minutes.

Milo added that the man, who was travelling alone with the device "possibly to the Alberta area," had no apparent intention, "at any time," to use it and that neither terrorism nor organized crime are suspected in the incident.

"It was just a horrible mistake that he had made," Milo said.

"It just looks like it was maybe a poor decision to create the device in the first place, and then maybe an inability to get rid of it safely — or not knowing how to get rid of it."

Derek Joseph Formosa was taken into custody at the border and charged with making and possessing an explosive device.

Formosa is scheduled to appear in provincial court in Estevan on Tuesday morning.

It's unfair to give a giant American corporation special treatment.

I can tell you personally that this is an incredibly competitive industry. One company does something and the others scramble to beat it. That's good, fair competition. But now, the Canadian Government is allowing a giant U.S. cellphone company to buy up small Canadian operators that Canadian cellphone companies like mine aren't allowed to buy. Since we can't bid, they'll likely even get a huge discount on the price, effectively at the Canadian taxpayers' expense. But it gets worse. They get to piggyback on the infrastructure we built — and they didn't contribute a cent. That's not good, fair competition. You know, we teach our kids to play fair. That's about as Canadian as it gets. So why is our government giving a giant U.S. corporation special treatment? That's not fair.

Ottawa needs to close the loopholes.

Plaque commemorates school

Centennial celebration. Public unveiling comes amid ongoing fight over future of beloved Connaught facility

MARCO VIGLIOTTI
marco.vigliotti@metronews.ca

Community organizers unveiled a plaque on Monday to commemorate the centennial of Regina's Connaught Community School, which remains at the centre of a heated battle between activists and the local school board over plans to replace the aging building.

At a public event held in conjunction with a community picnic, organizers paid tribute to the city's oldest public school building and called the edifice at the intersection of 13th Avenue and Elphinstone Street a staple of the Cathedral neighbourhood.

"We imagine people will stand in this spot 100 years from now to look at this plaque and contemplate the school and its place in this very progressive, unique, imaginative, creative and neighbourly neighbourhood," said Trish Elliott, a member of the Connaught Centennial Committee.

Ward 3 Coun. Shawn Fraser, who attended the unveiling, added: "When I look at this school, I think about the tens of thousands of people that it touched."

Earlier this year, the Regina Board of Education voted to replace Connaught rather than renovate the school, which faces a multitude of structural issues.

Board members pointed to a consultant's report that states repairing the building would cost about $4 million more than demolishing it and constructing a replacement school at the same site.

But community activists — specifically the group Save Our Connaught — dispute that report and are offering to pay for an independent review of the building to get another repair estimate.

Robert Hubick, a board member with Heritage Regina, accused the school board of allowing Connaught to deteriorate over the years. If the board had properly maintained the building, he said, Connaught wouldn't be faced with closure.

"If you maintain buildings over the years," Hubick added, "then you don't have to rip them down and build a $20-million school."

Taking count

Attendance up for Queen City Ex

The 2013 edition of the Queen City Exhibition wrapped up on Sunday, with organizers saying attendance figures increased by three per cent from last year's total.

The event welcomed 209,574 fair-goers to the exhibition grounds during its five-day run — more than the Ex's five-year average, said Josh Shaw, Evraz Place's event co-ordinator.

"We feel extremely fortunate with the weather conditions throughout the week that resulted in outstanding attendance," Shaw said. "We can definitely call this year's (Ex) a huge success."

In addition to the strong attendance, Shaw said, city police and security staff reported no "major incidents" during the exhibition. METRO

Fatalities

Trio of crashes claim three lives

Three people were killed in separate motor-vehicle accidents in Saskatchewan from Thursday to Sunday.

On Sunday at about 8 p.m., a 24-year-old man was pronounced dead at a hospital in Leader after a collision involving an all-terrain vehicle he was riding about five kilometres north of the town and west of Highway 21.

Alcohol is a suspected factor in the crash, RCMP said.

Another collision occurred on Saturday at about 5 a.m. on Highway 363 near Hodgeville, when a pickup truck rolled and took the life of its 18-year-old driver.

And on Thursday, a motorcycle and a SUV collided on Highway 9 near Yorkton. A rider of the motorcycle was pronounced dead.

"Anytime we can remind the public of the importance of driving safely — wearing your seatbelt, respecting those speed limits, focusing on what you're doing — it's good for us," said RCMP spokeswoman Natalie Gray. METRO

New Brunswick. Two young boys killed in their sleep by python: RCMP

Two young boys were killed by a python snake as they slept in an apartment above an exotic pet store in northern New Brunswick, the RCMP said Monday.

Const. Jullie Rogers-Marsh said the boys, aged five and seven, were visiting the apartment of a friend above Reptile Ocean Inc. in Campbellton when the incident occurred.

Rogers-Marsh said police arrived at the apartment around 6:30 a.m., at which point officers found the two dead boys.

"It (the snake) had escaped its enclosure at the store sometime through the night, got into the ventilation system and into the upstairs apartment," said Rogers-Marsh. "It's believed the two boys were strangled by the snake."

She said the snake was later captured and was in the possession of police.

Rogers-Marsh said autopsies were to be performed on the two victims on Tuesday. She couldn't confirm whether the two boys were related.

She said the owner of the reptile store lived in the apartment above.

Calls to the pet store were not returned on Monday. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brazil. Petition calls for return of Chico the pet monkey to adoptive family

When two police officers tore little Chico from the arms of Elizete Carmona, they said it was for his own good. After all, 71-year-old women aren't meant to live with endangered tufted capuchin monkeys.

But the case has upset many in Brazil, where thousands of people have signed an online petition calling on Sao Paulo state environmental officials to return Chico to the only home he's known for the past 37 years.

It's illegal to keep wild animals as pets in Brazil, especially those classified as endangered on the International Union for the Conservation of Nature's Red List of threatened species, as the tufted capuchin monkey has been.

But the Carmona family contends Chico is completely domesticated and might not survive the stress of separation.

When the officers came to their house in the city of San Carlos on Saturday, Chico grabbed onto Carmona and hugged her tight, one of the woman's sons, Everaldo Furlan, told the Globo television network.

Carmona said she was devastated when he was pulled away.

LGBTQ attacks in Russia nothing new

Violence. Canadian documentarian says aggression toward gays in Putin-led country is par for the course

JARED STORY
For Metro in Winnipeg

A Canadian documentarian says the violence and fear recently seen at a gay pride parade in Russia is nothing new.

Ken Coolen, the filmmaker behind the 2009 documentary Beyond Gay: The Politics of Pride, followed the then-president of the Vancouver Pride Society to various international Pride events, including one in Moscow in 2008.

"When we were (filming) in Russia, the communication was very cryptic. It is believed that phones are tapped and communications are monitored. ... When we went to the planning meeting the day before Pride, we were told to go to a hotel and then we had to call again. The meeting was actually not at a hotel but at a private residence nearby. When we went there we were asked not to film much of the apartment and to mask some of the persons in the room for fear of retribution."

On June 29 of this year, participants of St. Petersburg's fourth Pride parade were met with hostility and violence, including homophobic insults, rocks, eggs and smoke bombs thrown at the group of about 50 gay rights activists. At least eight of the anti-gay protestors made it past the police barrier and purportedly punched activists to the point of bleeding.

The violence toward gays in Russia comes in the wake of a contentious new law imposing fines on people accused of spreading "propaganda of non-traditional sexual relations."

"The aggression towards LGBTQ people in Russia has always been very active," Coolen said. "The difference the new law has made is that it has basically given permission to the hate-mongers to act openly violently towards LGBTQ people."

Like 1936 Olympics?

Standing up

As a co-founder of the first ever Pride House at the 2010 Winter Olympics in Vancouver, Ken Coolen said he's dismayed Russia will enforce its gay propaganda laws at the upcoming Sochi Games.

"I hesitate to make this comparison, but in 1936 the Olympics were held in Germany and people chose to look the other way and we saw how horrifically that turned out.

"We need to make sure that we stand up for the human rights of others."

Pageant winner accused of throwing bombs

A young beauty pageant winner in the U.S. is accused of throwing makeshift explosives from a car.

Kendra McKenzie Gill — recently crowned Miss Riverton, Utah — and three other 18-year-olds were arrested Saturday after allegedly throwing the homemade bombs at least nine times.

Police said they admitted buying plastic bottles, aluminum foil and household chemicals before assembling the devices.

"They were throwing them at both property and people," Unified Fire Authority Capt. Clint Mecham told KUTV-TV, adding that nobody was injured. "This goes well beyond a teenage prank."

Fire officials said the devices — which can spew caustic chemicals and shrapnel when they burst — can be dangerous.

"They can do a great deal of damage to property," Mecham told KSL-TV. "They can sever limbs. They can even kill people."

Gill was booked on suspicion of 10 counts of detonating an incendiary device.

Court ruling: You will (heart) boobies

U.S. appeal.
9-5 decision rules bracelets designed to promote breast-cancer awareness are not 'lewd' — and therefore cannot be banned in Pa. schools

A federal appeals court ruled Monday that a Pennsylvania school district cannot ban "I (heart) Boobies!" bracelets, rejecting the district's claim that the slogan — designed to promote breast-cancer awareness among young people — is lewd.

The 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals also concluded that school officials didn't prove the bracelets were disruptive.

"Because the bracelets here are not plainly lewd and because they comment on a social issue, they may not be categorically banned," Judge D. Brooks Smith wrote in the 9-5 decision.

The ruling is a victory for two Easton Area School District girls who challenged the school rule in 2010 with help from the American Civil Liberties Union. Easton is one of several school districts around the U.S. to ban the bracelets, which are distributed by the non-profit Keep A Breast Foundation of Carlsbad, Calif. The teens, Brianna Hawk and Kayla Martinez, testified that they merely hoped to promote awareness of the disease at their middle school. They filed the suit when they were suspended for defying the ban on their school's Breast Cancer Awareness Day.

In their dissent Monday, the five judges said the majority had wrongly reasoned that schools cannot limit student speech involving social commentary, even if it "could reasonably be deemed lewd, vulgar, plainly offensive, or constituting sexual innuendo."

Defence. Withdrawal from NATO surveillance programs will hurt Canadian firms

The Harper government's decision to cancel Canadian participation in two NATO surveillance programs will cost contracts in the country's aerospace industry, newly released documents show.

National Defence was hoping to save as much as $90 million per year by withdrawing from the jointly owned and operated Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS) and the Alliance Ground Surveillance, a fairly new program meant to use drones to monitor the battlefield.

Yet, documents show that taking part has meant a bonanza of tens of millions of dollars worth of work annually for at least half a dozen high-tech Canadian companies. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Funds

Between 1992 and 2010, Canada contributed $161M towards so-called depot-level maintenance of NATO's AWACS fleet, but Canadian companies received $180 million in contracts as part of the service package. Since 2010, the country's aerospace industry has pocketed roughly $12.9M annually in AWACS service.

One-ton swim

'Sink like a brick' no longer applies

Long-distance swimmer Jim "The Shark" Dreyer jumped into Lake St. Clair near the Michigan-Canada border on Monday to begin what he hopes will be a 35-kilometre success story — all while hauling a ton of bricks.

Thirty hours later, Dreyer plans to come ashore on Tuesday afternoon at Detroit's Belle Isle and finally beach his two dinghies filled with 334 bricks.

Dreyer is swimming with a GPS tracking device that will post his position online. It also comes equipped with a messaging system that allows him to communicate with the outside world.

At the touch of a button, Dreyer can send out three pre-programmed messages.

One lets his crew know he's OK. A second tells them he's not and to send a boat to his position. A third shows that he's in a life-threatening situation and requires immediate assistance from the Coast Guard.

He's been in tough situations before, overcoming high waves during his 97-kilometre crossing of Lake Superior and falling ill, vomiting repeatedly and dropping 20 pounds while swimming across Lake Huron. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Laboratory burger is a low-fat marvel but a low-flavour failure

Work in progress.
Scientist says flavour is an easy fix on the path to eco-friendly meat

They bit, they chewed but had hoped for more flavour.

Two volunteers in the first public frying of lab-grown hamburger in London, U.K., said Monday it had the right texture but was short on taste because of the lack of fat.

Mark Post, whose team at Maastricht University in the Netherlands developed the burger, hopes that making meat in labs could eventually help feed the world and fight climate change.

That goal is many years away, at best.

Sergey Brin, a co-founder of Google, appeared on a video shown at the event and announced that he funded the $330,000 project because of his concern for animal welfare.

Monday's taste test came after five years of research. Despite the tasters' concern about flavour, scientists say that can be tweaked.

Chef Richard McGeown cooks a burger grown from stem cells during the first public tasting event for the product held in London, U.K., on Monday. DAVID PARRY/PA/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"Taste is the least (important) problem since this could be controlled by letting some of the stem cells develop into fat cells," said Stig Omholt, director of biotechnology at the Norwegian University of Life Sciences. Adding fat to the burgers this way would probably be healthier than getting it from naturally chunky cows, said Omholt, who was not involved in the project. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

What? How? Why?

Scientists made the meat from the muscle cells of two cows. The cells were put into a nutrient solution to help them develop into muscle tissue, growing into small strands of meat.

- Experts say new methods are needed to satisfy growing carnivorous appetites without exhausting resources. By 2050, the Food and Agriculture Organization predicts global meat consumption will double as more people in developing countries can afford it. Raising animals for meat uses about 70 per cent of all agricultural land.

One year later, Curiosity sets sights on lofty goal

Mount Sharp has beckoned Curiosity since the NASA rover arrived on Mars exactly a year ago.

If microbes ever existed on Mars, the mountain represents the best hope for preserving the chemical ingredients that are fundamental to all living things.

Curiosity recently pointed its wheels south, rolling toward the base of Mount Sharp in a journey that will last many months. It will drive across the rock-strewn landscape, dodging bumps and taking in the scenery.

"We do a lot of off-roading on a lot of little dirt roads," said mission manager Jennifer Trosper.

Scientists have been eager for a peek of Mount Sharp since Curiosity, the size of a small SUV, touched down in an ancient crater near the Martian equator on the night of Aug. 5, 2012.

The world wondered whether Curiosity would nail its landing, which involved an acrobatic plunge through the thin atmosphere that ended with it being gently lowered to the ground with cables.

Mars Science Laboratory team member Miguel San Martin, left, celebrates with Adam Steltzner after the 2012 landing. DAMIAN DOVARGANES/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Once the euphoria of landing wore off, the six-wheel, nuclear-powered rover went to work, spending two months testing its instruments and systems.

To celebrate the landing anniversary, engineers commanded one of Curiosity's instruments to play Happy Birthday as the rover took a break from driving.

Royal sales boost.

Prince George of Cambridge was photographed leaving the hospital with his tiny hands emerging from a cotton swaddle printed with little birds. Distinctive little birds. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

It took 45 seconds, but that was enough. Newborn Prince George, carried from the hospital to the royal car, appeared in a cotton swaddle with tiny birds on it. Mums-to-be around the world wanted to know: Who are you wearing?

The answer shows what it is like when a small company gets swept into the maelstrom of attention that comes from touching the golden hem of the House of Windsor.

Once the photos of the swaddle hit the Internet, style bloggers and fashion writers identified the would-be king's new clothes as being from New-York-based aden + anais. Within four hours of George's appearance, the firm's website crashed. The next day, it crashed again. In nine days, the company had 7,000 orders — a 600 per cent increase in sales on that item.

The company never even issued a press release. Anyone who wanted to know the manufacturer simply had to type "royal swaddle" into Google, and up it came.

Raegan Moya-Jones, the chief executive of aden + anais, was about to start a meeting when a colleague brought in the picture. She couldn't believe it. "I thought it was Photoshopped," she said.

The company is still digging out from under a pile of orders for the swaddle, part of the Jungle Jam pack of four that in Britain costs 44.95 pounds (about $71). So just be prepared to wait if you want to similarly swaddle your little prince or princess. Jungle Jam is sold out for now in Britain and the U.S. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Beauty products. Revlon buys Colomer for $660M

Spain's Colomer markets products under brands such as Revlon Professional hair care, which it currently licenses from Revlon Inc. It also sells shampoos, conditioners and other hair products to consumers under the Creme of Nature brand, and also sells nail polish and body lotions.

Revlon sells Revlon and Almay makeup, Revlon ColorSilk hair dye and other beauty products. The New York company is looking to strengthen its sales outside the U.S. Like many consumer products companies, it has had to deal with the recession in Europe, which has hurt spending. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOVING BACK HOME IS NOT SO YUCKIE

SHE SAYS

Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

Hunched over a pile of boxes in my living room this weekend, I was struck by the fact that in the past five years I have moved five times. This might seem extreme, but renting in the city in your 20s can be a transient time, and living arrangements never seem more than temporary.

One of those relocation destinations — somewhere between finishing grad school and becoming gainfully employed — was back home with my mother and father. Undesirable as it seemed at the time, I'm glad I made the move. It was a period of joblessness and uncertainty; if I had decided to nose-dive into debt in the name of "independence," it would have been a foolish mistake. Still, I'm glad it's over.

Today there are a record number of adult children living with their parents. In the United States, a Pew Research Center study released last week shows that a startling 36 per cent of Americans aged 18 to 31 are living under the same roof as Mom and Dad.

When adult children move back in with their parents, it can be a difficult adjustment for both parties. Empty-nesters are suddenly burdened with financial strain from freeloading offspring — only about 35 per cent of millennials living with their parents actually pay rent — while disenchanted boomerang kids experience a sense of failure as they return to their childhood bedrooms after years of independence.

Pop-sociologists have developed a particularly harsh acronym for this demographic: YUCKIES, or Young Unwitting Costly Kids — a generation of unemployed young adults who are capitalizing on free room and board back home and draining their parents' retirement savings in the process.

At certain life junctures — graduations, breakups, babies — many of us will rely on our parents to act as a safety net. Navigating the uncertain terrain of adulthood is challenging, and while moving back home can make you feel as if you're sliding backwards, rather than forward, it doesn't have to be that way.

When I returned to my parents' house at 24, I had to resist the urge to fall back into familiar childhood routines and work on cohabiting in a mature dynamic. I learned a lot about my family, and myself, and I developed a new appreciation for my parents as interesting adults, not just mom and dad. As counterintuitive as it might seem, in a lot of ways moving back home helped me grow up.

There is always a way to make the most of a situation, even when you might think your living arrangements are less than ideal. So if you ever find yourself making the move back in with your parents, try to focus on progression, not regression. Approach the situation with optimism and gratitude, rather than bitterness, and you'll find it can be a valuable — not to mention budget-friendly — experience. Just don't get too comfortable.

Everyday objects that escape the ordinary

Nick Albertson proves that beauty can be found even in the most uninteresting things. The Chicago-based artist and photographer, 29, arranges mass-produced objects — such as paper bags, rubber bands and sandwich bags — into clever patterns and photographs them to look like abstract art.

Q&A

Old meanings stripped

What is the idea behind your photographs?

NICK ALBERTSON
Artist and photographer, 29, based in Chicago

I strip utilitarian objects of their functions, repurposing them to create visceral experiences. This esthetic references abstract paintings by stripping away meanings and distilling what I was interested in.

What are you interested in?

I hope that the viewer can get lost and enveloped in these photographs. I like the tension that the images have between being beautiful and referencing high art forms, and being made quite literally of throwaway materials.

You'd think that with an infinite number of everyday objects, it would be easy to produce a stylish artwork, but I actually struggle to find new things to use. I look for very minimal objects (no logos, nothing that will be a headache to light or manipulate) and many times I'll start and then scrap it.

What objects work for you then?

Anything you can buy in bulk. Something like a can opener is an everyday object but would not work for my project. You cannot just buy one rubber band — you have to buy a whole bag of them. METRO WORLD NEWS

Last year it was waving bears; this year it's dancing bears. With members of the Ursidae family well out of hibernation, there's been no shortage of bears being broadcast online. Explore's live bear-and-salmon cam has been a Clickbait favourite since Day 1, but other bear parties have stepped onto the stage via YouTube.

What Goes On When You're Not There:

This time-lapse video uploaded by Alberta Parks shows exactly what the mammals get up to when we pesky humans aren't around — and it's party. They really like to party.

Bearjacked:

Further proof of their party-animal nature, this bear gets on its hind legs, opens a truck door and tries to jack whatever's inside (presumably beer).

Polite Bear Waves Hello:

In case you missed it the first time around, Polite Bear gets funnier with each view. Watch as the nicest bear in the world waves back while a friendly tourist drives by waving, with an enthusiasm only possible for those still in their single-digit years.

The Place Beyond the Pines

Director. Derek Cianfrance

Stars. Ryan Gosling, Eva Mendes, Bradley Cooper

The highways savagely twist and turn around Schenectady, N.Y., the blue-collar setting for The Place Beyond the Pines — but they're nothing compared to the human road map that is Luke (Ryan Gosling). A motorcycle stunt rider for a circus, he's covered in tattoos. Introduced by a long tracking shot that concludes with a dangerous whirl inside a spherical cage; he's a man going nowhere in a hurry. Roads and tattoos make apt metaphors for this entangled drama by Derek Cianfrance (Blue Valentine), that also takes in complicated characters played by Bradley Cooper and Ray Liotta. Actually three interlocking stories in one, The Place Beyond the Pines flirts with exhaustion and threatens credulity with its extreme generational conflicts and use of coincidence. Cianfrance and his sterling cast keep it all together, vanquishing doubt and soap suds.

PETER HOWELL

To The Wonder

Director. Terrence Malick

Stars. Ben Affleck, Olga Kurylenko, Rachel McAdams

The heart needs no narrative; it just wants what it wants. Terrence Malick intuits this, and expresses it majestically and almost silently in this surprisingly swift followup to The Tree of Life, parts of which are actually incorporated into this film. Ben Affleck plays an Oklahoma man who finds a woman (Olga Kurylenko) and passion in Paris; their stateside return brings domesticity, regrets and Affleck's involvement with a woman from his past (Rachel McAdams).

Percy Jackson. Actress Alexandra Daddario says franchise celebrates that special thing inside of us that makes us strong

scene@metronews.ca

When the bulky-dubbed adventure flick Percy Jackson and the Olympians: The Lightening Thief hit theatres three years ago, star Alexandra Daddario was "hopefully confident" the book-turned-blockbuster would see a sequel.

"Percy Jackson was my first big movie and I was sort of unaware of the box office and what it meant and what (the producers) were expecting and that kind of thing," said the 27-year-old New York actress. "Everybody hopes it does well, obviously, but I think it has a great built-in audience."

Based on author Rick Riordan's bestselling adventures about a seemingly troubled teen that possesses incredible abilities and powers, the 2010 cinematic introduction slightly stumbled out of the gate domestically but eventually earned more than $225 million worldwide. That would surely be enough to convince all involved to return with the sequel Percy Jackson: Sea of Monsters — which opens this Wednesday.

Based on the second book in the five-novel series, the fantasy thriller casts Greek demigods Percy Jackson (Logan Lerman) and Annabeth (Daddario) into the mysterious Bermuda Triangle to seek a magical artifact with incredible healing power in order to save their home.

"I think the books and the films (have) the same common themes," said Daddario about the franchise's immense popularity. "It's great to be part of something that inspires kids. I think the great thing about the book and about the films is that no matter who you are and what your problems are — you (may) not literally be a god or find out that you have literal powers — but there is something stronger inside of you; that makes you really special, wonderful and strong. I think that's inspiring for kids and that's the message of the books and the film."

Doctor Who. From the playground to the screen

Peter Capaldi has been named as the 12th actor to play Doctor Who, the main character of the long-running science-fiction series of the same name, replacing Matt Smith, who has played the role for the past four years.

"It's so wonderful not to keep this secret any longer," Capaldi says. "I haven't played Doctor Who since I was nine on the playground." The announcement was made during a live special on the BBC, offering a glimpse of the series' upcoming 50th anniversary special. Capaldi himself won't make his first appearance until the 2013 Christmas Special. Scottish actor Capaldi is best known as the foul-mouthed political fixer Malcolm Tucker in the TV series the Thick of It and its movie spin-off, In the Loop. NED EHRBAR/MWN

Apparently Simon Cowell got plenty of warning from his "harem" of ex-girlfriends to watch out for Lauren Silverman, the married woman now said to be pregnant with his child, as they "were concerned about her motives and intentions," according to Radar Online. "Simon was warned — on multiple occasions — that he needed to be careful," says a source, explaining that Cowell has remained quite close to many of his exes. "Everyone was aware that they were hooking up and that Lauren was married. Naturally, Simon's friends were very concerned about the situation and made that known to him."

Don't lag on these poses

Lisa Sanfilippo, known for smart bio-mechanical alignment yoga, gives some tips for before and after your flight to avoid jet lag

ROMINA MCGUINNESS

Standing big toe extension

Start by standing with feet together and hands by your sides. Bend your right knee and clasp your big toe with your right thumb, index and middle fingers. Place your left hand on your hip for support. Relax your shoulders and begin to extend your right leg straight out in front of you. Extend your leg as far as you can without losing your grip or straining your shoulders (you can bend your knee). Keep your hips level and lift your chest tall while gazing slightly past your lifted big toe. Keep the leg you're standing on straight. Hold for up to 30 seconds. Repeat on the opposite side.

Headstand

Begin on all fours. Interlace all of your fingers, tucking your bottom pinkie finger in so it rests in front of your other pinkie finger. Keep your fingers laced and put your hands down on the mat, keeping your wrists firm. Place the crown of your head directly behind the heels of your hands, but do not hold your head. Curl your toes under, lift your knees up, and walk your knees in toward your face. Bring one knee to your chest and lightly hop with the other foot to bring that leg onto the same position. Straighten your legs up toward the ceiling. Hold for up to 10 seconds. Come down with an exhalation, without losing the lift of the shoulder blades and with both feet touching the floor at the same time.

Wild thing

Begin in downward facing dog. Lift the right leg up into the air and rotate your hip open as you bend your knee. Pivot toward the outside edge of your left foot as you spiral your chest and pelvis to face the ceiling. Drop your right foot onto the floor behind you, landing on your foot or just the ball of your foot for a deeper bend. Arch your chest and lift your right arm up. Extend it forward, with its inner side turning toward the floor. Lift your hips and let your head hang. Hold for up to 30 seconds. Return to downward facing dog and repeat on the opposite side.

Dolphin

Begin on all fours. Place your forearms on the mat, shoulder-width apart. Curl your toes under and lift your hips up. Straighten your legs and walk as far as you can toward your hands, keeping your shoulders directly over your elbows. Relax your neck and gaze just slightly forward.

"This brings circulation down into the front of the chest and wakes up the arms and the shoulders," Sanfilippo said.

Camel

Begin by kneeling with your knees and feet hip-width apart and the tops of your feet flat on the floor. Keep your pelvis over your knees, your tailbone down, and your lower belly lifted. Bring your hands to your heart in the prayer position, roll your shoulders back and hug your elbows in. Curl your chest open by kneeling back, but keep your hips over your knees. When you can't curl your chest back any further, release your arms and grab your heels (you can also curl your toes under and touch them with your fingertips). Hold for up to 30 seconds.

Legs up the wall

Begin seated, perpendicular to a wall. Bend your knees and lie back on the floor. Pivot your torso and extend your legs up the wall so your hips and the entire length of the back of your legs rest against the wall. You can use a strap to tie your feet together so your legs can relax even further. Let your arms rest next to you, palms up, or bend your elbows at right angles. You can stay in this pose anywhere from five to 15 minutes.

"This is suitable for all levels. Just getting your legs up the wall brings good oxygen flow into the lungs, into the throat where the thyroid and the parathyroid are, both instrumental in the hormonal regulation of sleep," Sanfilippo said.

Lentil Feta Salad with Lemon Dressing and Grilled Shrimp

If you prefer, you can buy canned lentils and forget about the cooking, but I always find that cooking your own produces a better flavour and texture.

This is a great vegetarian dish on its own without the shrimp or served as a side dish to any entrée

1. In a saucepan, combine the stock and lentils. Bring to a boil. Reduce the heat to a simmer, cover and cook just until tender, about 20 to 25 minutes. Do not overcook. Drain any excess liquid. Cool to room temperature.

2. Sauté or grill tiger shrimp for about 5 minutes or just until cooked.

3. In a large bowl, stir together the cooked lentils, red pepper, green onion, parsley, red onion, olive oil, lemon juice, vinegar, garlic, mustard, salt, pepper and feta. Toss together before serving, and garnish each plate with one shrimp.

Ingredients

- 2 1/2 cups vegetable stock
- 3/4 cup dried green lentils
- 6 large tiger shrimp (peeled and cleaned) (optional)
- 3/4 cup diced red bell pepper
- 1/3 cup chopped green onions
- 1/3 cup chopped fresh parsley
- 1/4 cup diced red onion
- 2 tbsp olive oil
- 3 tbsp freshly squeezed lemon juice
- 2 tsp balsamic vinegar
- 1 1/2 tsp minced garlic
- 1 tsp Dijon mustard
- 1/8 tsp salt
- 1/8 tsp ground black pepper
- 1/2 cup diced light (30% reduced) feta cheese (1 1/2 oz/45 g)

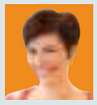
Catfish got your tongue?



NUTRI-BITES

You simply must eat more fish. The evidence is mounting that the omega 3's from fish is preventative of everything from heart disease to breast cancer.

But if we all listened to this sage advice we'd risk overfishing, which is becoming a big problem as oceans and lakes are unable to keep up with the burden of commercial fishing operations.

Farming makes very good sense ecologically, but, not all farmed fish are created equal. It can and must be done properly — in terms of the environment and from a health and food safety perspective.

Look for a farmed fish that has the endorsement of watchdogs like: Monterey Bay Aquarium, Ocean Wise, SeaChoice, the Audubon Society, the World Wildlife Fund or others.

Some of the sustainable practices that are showing promise:

1. Top-feeding the fish means they stay on the surface and their diet can be monitored rather than mucking around the bottom.

2. Careful attention to food. Fish meal can be contaminated. Some species are fed land grains to prevent this.

3. No antibiotics, dyes or hormones were used.

4. Conversion rates are high, which means that the fish put on weight fast and are more efficiently able to use the small amount of feed that they get. This means there is much less fish food wasted.

One of the few farmed fishes that meets this criteria is U.S. Farm-Raised Catfish.

Best financial strategy? Go simple

YOUR MONEY
Alison Griffiths
money@metronews.ca

I just spent a relaxing week on Vancouver Island, inhaling the clean air and savouring a glorious view of ocean and mountain.

While there I was struck by the burgeoning west coast culture of simplicity that pervades everything from food to hobbies, houses and even art.

Simplicity is directly connected to healthier finances. Hiking and biking is cheaper than a gym membership and a personal trainer.

Indulging your inner cook at home pays off hugely compared to take-out and eating out.

Unfortunately, so much written about improving your finances feels negative — cut out this, reduce that.

In contrast, aiming for simplicity is positive.

Focus on what you really care about, then choose a path to get there. If you do, you'll avoid spending money on a bunch of stuff you don't really want or need.

My husband's 97-year-old godmother, who we visit in Victoria every year, long ago perfected this attitude to life.

She thinks long and hard about what she wants and doesn't hesitate to spend money once a decision is made.

About five years ago she decided to enlarge and cover her patio in order to enjoy the garden during inclement weather. She paid $5,000 during the housing\ renovation boom.

"My friends gave me what-for about it," she explains with a laugh, "but I told them I wanted it now and I wanted to enjoy it for as long as possible."

She also considered replacing her carpet with linoleum to make it easier to navigate with a walker. But, the deck and garden won out.

This smart lady thought about what she wanted, spent time debating her choices, picked something she could afford and felt wonderful about spending the money.

Try taking this approach into the clothes closet. It may seem easier to go out and buy something, rather than mine what exists. But half a day spent combining outfits and reacquainting yourself with things not worn for a long time is actually the heart and soul of simplicity.

And it is a calmer, cheaper and more satisfying way to find something new to wear.

The route to financial simplicity is simple.

First decide what's truly important to you (regardless of whether it is a need or want) then take time to come up with the best and simplest way to get there.

Often you'll find it's the least expensive too.

For some, posting wedding pics is an iDon't

Unplugged. Put away the phones and watch us, wedding couples are urging

ALISON BOWEN
Metro World News in New York City

You're at a wedding, inching above the other guests to capture that perfect shot of the bride.

You snap the pic on your iPhone, but it's blurry, and other phones dot the image. Not your best work, and you weren't really paying attention when the bride appeared.

This type of cellphone invasion is leading couples to take away — or at least gently suggest putting away — phones at weddings.

"Unplugged" weddings used to be the norm for celebrity weddings, event planners say.

Celebs who don't want pictures or details leaking out about their big days would post valets to check guests' phones, says Michael Russo, an event planner who works with celebrity weddings.

"This used to be a celebrity thing," adds event planner Sarah Pease. "Now it's an everyday thing."

A recent David's Bridal survey found that 52 per cent of people said the couple should be first to post a picture online.

Recent bride Jennifer Edwards banned phones at her ceremony.

"We were constantly noticing people watching the entire ceremony through a small screen on their cellphone," she says. "I absolutely did not want to pay an outrageous amount of money for professional photographers just to have all my wedding photos on Facebook seconds after we said 'I do.'"

Other times, brides and grooms don't want guests tapping at phones at a wedding, whether texting or tweeting.

"People want their guests to be engaged, and they want them to be having a good time and be present in the moment," Russo says.

Pease says she's seen well-meaning relatives actually block the professional photographer as they creep in the aisle to take photos on an iPad.

To alert guests, some post a sign at the door, and others will put a note in the program, Pease says. Others will ask the priest or officiant to make an announcement.

But even with all the messaging, sometimes people still can't give up phones, Russo says.

"It's so funny, because at weddings it's typically dim, so you can see the people on their phones because their faces are completely illuminated — and it's not from candlelight, that's for sure," he says.

Take a picture — it'll last longer! ISTOCK IMAGES

The flip side

Some couples love social media at weddings, even creating a hashtag for all guests to use and placing it somewhere guests can see. Planner Maya Kalman says hosts want people to post photos in a certain way so that everyone can see them right away.

"People have specifically made signs and ask guests to post all of their pictures to a certain Instagram," she says.

In Boston, Paula Marrero at Marrero Events said one couple even created an app especially to share wedding pics.

A-Rod to fight PED penalty

Dope boys.
Yankee star slapped with lengthiest of several MLB all-star suspensions in wake of Biogenesis scandal

Alex Rodriguez stepped up to the plate greeted by a standing boo-vation and blooped a single in his first at-bat of the season.

Hours after Major League Baseball suspended the New York Yankees star through the 2014 season in the Biogenesis drug case, Chicago White Sox fans got their say on Monday night.

And boy, did they let him hear it.

They jeered him during pre-game warmups and introductions, and they really tore into him when he walked to the batter's box leading off the second inning.

On the third pitch, Rodriguez dunked a hit into shallow left field. He made it to third base with no outs, but was stranded.

Rodriguez did not deny using performance-enhancing drugs in a news conference at U.S. Cellular Field after the punishment came down, and he said he will talk about whether he used PEDs at another time when he is more free to speak.

He did dig in for a battle, saying no one else will defend him unless he stands up for himself. Then he took to the field, starting at third base and batting fourth against the White Sox.

"There's nothing about it that's been easy," Rodriguez said. "All of it has been challenging. I'm sure there's been mistakes made along the way. We're here now. I'm a human being. I've had two hip surgeries. I've had two knee surgeries. I'm fighting for my life. I have to defend myself."

The three-time MVP was one of 13 players disciplined on Monday, one of the biggest mass suspensions in the history of the game.

All-stars Nelson Cruz, Jhonny Peralta and Everth Cabrera were banned for 50 games each. Rodriguez, however, got 211 games, due to start on Thursday.

He will appeal his suspension, and that means he will likely be able to play for the rest of this season while his case winds through arbitration.

Prior to his first game since last Oct. 18, Rodriguez signed autographs and drew a crowd — of both fans and photographers. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bad company

The suspensions are thought to be the most at once for off-the-field conduct since 1921, when Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis banned eight Chicago White Sox players for life for throwing the 1919 World Series against Cincinnati.

- As for modern-day all-stars, outfielder Nelson Cruz leads Texas in homers and RBIs, while Jhonny Peralta is a top-hitting shortstop in Detroit.
- Others agreeing to 50-game bans included Yankees catcher Francisco Cervelli and outfielder Fernando Martinez; Philadelphia pitcher Antonio Bastardo; Seattle catcher Jesus Montero; New York Mets infielder Jordany Valdespin and outfielder Cesar Puello; Houston pitcher Sergio Escalona; and free agent pitchers Fautino De Los Santos and Jordan Norberto.

Guarding his legacy

"I am disappointed with the penalty and intend to appeal and fight this through the process. I am eager to get back on the field and be with my teammates in Chicago tonight."

Alex Rodriguez in a statement on the drug allegations and returning to his team.

NHL, IceArizona finalize sale of Coyotes

Gary Bettman says he believes in an Arizona NHL team. GETTY IMAGES FILE

The Phoenix Coyotes' ownership saga is over.

The NHL announced that the sale of the team to Canadian-led owners was finalized after it was approved by the board of governors Monday.

Once the board of governors voted to approve the sale to the IceArizona group, led by Renaissance Sports & Entertainment's Anthony LeBlanc and George Gosbee, the league's ownership of the Coyotes was terminated. The NHL had owned the team for almost four years.

"To our fans and partners in the Valley, thank you for your continued loyalty, commitment and patience for the Coyotes," Gosbee said in a statement. "The future looks bright for our franchise."

The NHL sold the Coyotes to Renaissance for $170 million US, though there was no certainty about the deal until Glendale, Ariz., completed a lease agreement in early July.

"If (the city council) voted it down, this was the end of the road," LeBlanc said at the time.

Instead, the Coyotes have a 15-year lease at Jobing.com Arena.

"The National Hockey League believes in Arizona as an NHL market and that these new owners can provide the Coyotes the opportunity to secure a stable, long-term future in Glendale," commissioner Gary Bettman said in a statement. THE CANADIAN PRESS

You can do your career prospects a lot of good today if you face up to some kind of challenge rather than run away from it. Important people are watching you closely, so make sure you shine.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
You don't have to play by the rules. In fact, with today's new moon falling in the most adventurous area of your solar chart the rules might as well not exist — for you anyway!

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
No matter how much someone tries to intimidate you today, you must not give in. What can they do about it? What matters more than anything now is that you stand up for your rights — and other people's too.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
There are times when it is sensible to let others take the lead and this is one of them. A new moon in your opposite sign means the less you interfere, the more you will benefit from others' actions.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
You must get organized. Above all, you must pay attention to what's going on around you. Details are always important but rarely more so than now.
